Why J.Lo & Ben's love is DOOMED!

By Art Dworken

A POPULAR radio DJ — who is an expert on rehab — predicts the hot and heavy romance between movie hunk Ben Affleck and brunette beauty Jennifer Lopez, 33, will crash and burn fast unless they sl-o-o-o-o-ow down.

Greg Budell, 50, the morning news co-anchor on 101.5 LITE FM in Miami, says the first rule for recovering alcoholics is not to get involved in any heavy relationships for at least one year.

But it was only recently that Affleck, 30, checked himself into Promises, the exclusive drug and alcohol center in Malibu, Calif.

Budell, who openly admits past addictions to cocaine and booze, says he knows the drill because he learned it the hard way.

"I've kept testing that unwritten rule with disastrous results and ended up out of my mind and on a bender,"

Alcoholics shouldn't rush into new relationships

— says news anchorman

Greg Budell

he tells The EXAMINER.

"I've been married three times and engaged to four others, which is why my on-the-air sidekick Susan Wise refers to me as 'The Lord of the Engagement Rings.'

"Based on what I've been reading about Ben and J.Lo, I would have to say Ben's very high on this woman. Before getting hitched, I would tell him to take a deep breath and look at where he is in terms of recovery.

"Judging by the recent comments of Ben's pal Matt Damon — that he's never seen Affleck happier — Ben has clearly stuck his toe in the water. But now, in my opinion, he needs to gradually get wet, instead of jumping in with both feet."

Four years ago, Budell hit rock-bottom.

"I lost everything to alcohol," he admits. "And while I've remained clean and sober ever since, I'm still rebuilding. I'm very sensitive to Ben's current situation because it was a MAJOR stumbling block for me.

"This is why I feel a moral obligation to stand up and tell Ben: 'Whoa, this doesn't look good.'"

Are supercouple Ben and Jennifer headed for splitsville?
